

Thanks to our peer reviewers

For the past five years, Intervention has employed a rigorous system of external peer review. This means that each, and every, paper in the Peer reviewed section of the journal are rigorously evaluated by three peer reviewers, one of whom is from a low or middle income country, preferably the country that is highlighted in the paper under review. The Editorial Board of Intervention believes this system significantly improves the quality of our published manuscripts, and ensures that the content of the journal accurately reflects the needs and standards of the field. Intervention could not maintain these standards without all of those experts who have voluntarily dedicated their invaluable time to achieve this goal.

Therefore, we wish to acknowledge and thank all 143 peer reviewers, from around the world, who have graciously and kindly given their time to evaluate one or more manuscripts for the journal in the last five years:
