

About this journal

INTERVENTION, The International Journal of Mental Health, Psychosocial Work and Counselling in Areas of Armed Conflict is a multi-disciplinary journal. It is meant for mental health workers such as psychiatrists, psychotherapists and psychiatric nurses, and also for counsellors, psycho-social workers and community workers, staff members of NGO's developing mental health or psychosocial projects, and international experts in the field.

The purpose of the journal is to make existing knowledge on mental health, psychosocial work and counselling in areas of armed conflict explicit and accessible to interested parties in areas of armed conflict and elsewhere. The journal will publish articles that are not only relevant for professionals working in areas of armed conflict, but also for those working with refugees from areas of armed conflict in Europe, Australia, North-America etc.

The journal publishes articles based on both empirical research and practical experience, and literature reviews. Articles may also be abridged and adapted versions of material published in specialised handbooks. In addition, the journal welcomes descriptions and evaluations of current projects in the fields of community mental health, counselling or psychosocial work, including training approaches for local professionals. Descriptions of individual cases that are illustrative in some way of a more general problem, and reviews of relevant books are also welcome.

The initiative to start this Journal was taken by 'Shanthiham' (House of Peace), a counselling centre located in Jaffna, Sri Lanka. INTERVENTION, The International Journal of Mental Health, Psychosocial Work and Counselling in Areas of Armed Conflict is published by Intervention Foundation under auspices of War Trauma Foundation in close collaboration with IRCT, International Rehabilitation Council for Torture Victims. WAR TRAUMA FOUNDATION

War Trauma Foundation is dedicated to the provision, via aid organisations, of training programmes for trauma treatment to benefit victims of war and organised violence throughout the world.

In the past half century, a whole new science has been developed to combat the horrifying trauma caused by war, terror and violence. These scientific developments find wide areas of application. Today, many organisations are engaged in programmes aimed at capacity building for local people, for example by training them to become psychosocial workers or counsellors. WTF wants to support these organisations both professionally and financially.

Local organisations may apply for this kind of assistance.

To date, War Trauma Foundation has been engaged in projects in Algeria, Cambodia, Sri Lanka, Nepal, Croatia, Bosnia Herzegovina, Serbia, Kosovo, Rwanda, Burundi, the Democratic Republic Congo, South Africa, Namibia and East Timor.

War Trauma Foundation can count on the voluntary professional advice of a council of 17 experts: psychiatrists, psychologists and anthropologists.
